A: I found a vendor who actually offers the service, and it cost just $150. Here is the link: Q: Sort array of dictionaries by key, but omit first 3 I have this array: [{id:1, project:Rome}, {id:2, project:Paris}, {id:3, project:Dubai}] How to sort it by id, and then omit first 3 records. The result should be like: [{id:1, project:Rome}, {id:3, project:Dubai}, {id:2, project:Paris}] A: Simple: var sortedArray = yourArr.sorted(by: {$0.id! > $1.id!}) The $0 and $1 work just like in C: The 0 is your old object, the 1 is your new object in the sortedArray. In your case you only have to sort by id. But if your set of data was larger, sorting by one key could be expensive. So you have to decide how to sort your data. December 23, 2016 - Brooklyn Nets center Mason Plumlee says that he's still "in it to win it" before a nine-game road trip begins on New Year's Day against the Phoenix Suns. Plumlee said he knows that his team has taken a major step back and he's not happy about the way things have gone. But he says, "I'm still in it." And if it doesn't go well, the Nets will get some help. Plumlee is the reigning NBA defender of the year and was the first call up from the D League on Monday to serve as a stand in center on the Nets' road game against the Portland Trail Blazers last night. Plumlee said he spoke to coach Kenny Atkinson and told him he was willing to roll with whatever lineup he wanted and play whatever position he needed to to help the Nets win. "I think we're going to keep playing hard," said Plumlee. "We just have to be together and be a team."
